

Pathrutikana Kannada In 1957, an English language textbook written by D.S. Kotanyi was translated into Kannada by B. N. Srikanta Sastri, and published in 1958 as a children's textbook. In 1964, the book was translated into Bengali and published by Kolkata publisher Jagadambika Prakashani, under the title Anubhasha Mrushti. In 1970, an English language translation was published by D.R. Uppaala, with the Kannada title, Kannada Neetu, Neetu Aaranyaru. The new edition was translated by D.S. Prasanna, published by Prasanna Pustakalaya and was available in both Braille and print formats. The 1986 edition is published by Uppaalakolahini Pustakalaya, re-issued in 1996 and 2001, and 2007. At present, the book is available in print, Braille and audio formats, and is published by Bharat Karnataka. In 2015, an e-book version was published in both languages by Idea Book House. Madhvacharya – Charuva Durva Duru Nepali Nepali, a language of Newar people, is the other official language of Nepal, along with Nepali Sign Language. It is spoken in seven northern districts of Nepal namely, Kanchanpur, Lumbini, Morang, Parbat, Makwanpur, Surkhet and Tanahu. The language was probably first spoken in the villages of Bahadurpura and Dhunikha (Rani) at the beginning of the 9th century. It is likely that it was brought by Shah Siya (8th century CE) from the Indo-Aryan Punjab to Nepal. There is strong evidence that Nepali has had official status in Nepal since the rule of King Prithvi Narayan Shah (1769–1792). In 1767, King Prithvi Narayan Shah officially recognised the language as the official language of Nepal. The Nepali script was created in 1780 by Rana Gupchup Singh. It was only in 1847 that Nepali became an official language of the country. The Constitution of Nepal, 1951, also states that Nepal's official language is Nepali. The language is written in the Devanagari, Latin and Arabic scripts, and
